MEMBERS in the News

David Bilder, of the University of California, Berkeley, who first became an ASCB member in 2001, will receive the 2010 Harland Winfield Mossman Award in Developmental Biology. The Award, presented by the American Association of Anatomists, is presented annually "to recognize young investigators who have made important contributions to the field of developmental biology and have demonstrated remarkable promise of future accomplishments."

Michael N. Hall, of the University of Basel, Biozentrum, an ASCB member since 2002, was awarded the 2009 Louis-Jeantet Prize for Medicine for his pioneering research on fundamental mechanisms in the control of cell growth.

In Memoriam

We note the recent passing of ASCB members Heinz Herrmann, an ASCB founder; Philip Siekevitz, an ASCB past president; and John Charles Sisson. We express our condolences to their families, friends, and colleagues. More information will be forthcoming. ■

The ASCB wishes to express deep appreciation to all the exhibitors who attended the 2009 Annual Meeting and helped ensure its success.
